HAPPENINGS IN STATE

CALIFORNIA CREAMERY MEN CONVENE—ELKS OF STATE IN ANNUAL REUNION

PETALUMA, Cal., Oct. 2.—Dean E. H. Van Norman of the University of California farm school, C. F. Frevert, creamery specialist, C. F. Doane, cheese specialist, both of the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture, will address the annual convention of the California Creamery Operators Association which opened in Petaluma today. Creamerymen representing practically every county in the state are in attendance. The convention will last three days and although most of the time will be devoted to discussing technical questions and business methods, a suitable program of entertainment has been arranged by the citizens of Petaluma.

MONTEREY, Cal., Oct. 4.—California Elks gathered in Monterey today for the annual Elks reunion, to last four days. The feature will be a state reception to Fred Harper of Virginia, grand exalted ruler of the Elks. As is customary at Elks gatherings, fun will be the chief things on the program, although the serious side of life will be looked upon long enough for a discussion of what California Elkdom is doing in the war and other timely subjects before the lodge. Monterey is expected to do itself proud in the way of entertainment.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., October 4.—Dr. Chas. Keane, state veterinarian, is on the trail of a gang of fake veterinarians operating in various parts of the state under the guise of being deputy state veterinarians. Dr. Keane says these impostors go around testing cattle for tuberculosis and charge the farmers $3 to $4 for the fake inspection. Dr. Keane also has sent out warnings to the farmers and cattle men to beware of these fakers, informing them that no charge is made by the state for inspection.

Junior college students are required to take physical training the same as high school students, declared Will C. Wood, state high school commissioner, in reply to a letter of inquiry from David Brucham, principal of the Long Beach junior college.

Dr. J. P. Iverson, formerly chief deputy state veterinarian, has been appointed assistant secretary and executive officer of the state cattle protection board, Dr. Charles Keane, state veterinarian, has announced.

Initiative petitions to place the Rominger bill, an anti-saloon and anti-whisky measure, on the ballot in 1918 will be put in circulation in California next week. H. L. Stoll, secretary of the California Grape Protective Association, has obtained the necessary petitions from Secretary of State Jordan and is preparing to place them in the hands of circulators. He is confident that the necessary number of signatures will be obtained.

"SUNDAY" NEXT SUNDAY

Sunday morning, October 7th, 10 o'clock sharp, a whole section (600 seats) at the Sunday Tabernacle has positively been reserved for any Glendale people who care to go at that time. Badges must be secured.

The Presbyterian church is following the plan suggested by the Sunday executive committee, in giving up their morning service.

The church committee, composed of R. D. King, C. C. Widney, James Newton and Edmund Stafford, has arranged for a train of P. E. cars to leave the church, corner Broadway and Cedar streets at 10 o'clock sharp Sunday morning and will leave Brand and Broadway a few minutes later, taking on passengers who may assemble at that point, and then go direct to 12th and Hill streets, two blocks from the Tabernacle. Round trip tickets, 25c; children, half fare.

Tickets and admission badges may be secured at Horton's shoe store, Brand boulevard, from Mr. Widney; also from the James Newton Electric Co. on Broadway near the City Hall.

Return on any car during the day.

All who may not have other church appointments will be welcomed as a part of this special delegation. The church makes no profit. The accommodation and pleasure of the people is alone desired.

FIRST AID TONIGHT

There will be a meeting this evening at 7:30 at Red Cross headquarters on Brand boulevard to form a First Aid class. Any one desiring to take this work should be present at that time. The only expense connected with the course is the 50 cents for registration.

Chairman Nurses Training Classes.

A GREAT WORK

BOYS AT CAMP KEARNEY APPRECIATE Y. M. C. A. SAYS H. E. COOPER

Camp Kearney, October 2, 1917.
Editor Glendale Evening News:

I am writing to call your attention to the great work the Y. M. C. A. is doing here at camp. I know it is the same at all camps. The Y. M. C. A. is furnishing us with entertainments every night. Two or three nights of the week there are moving pictures, one night a local talent affair, and the rest of the week lectures and talks by some nationally renowned speakers. They also are supplying equipment for all kinds of out-door sports and have an athletic director here as an instructor.

On Sunday they have opened their tent to the Catholics for their services and later in the morning have services for Protestant denominations.

If it were not for the Y. M. C. A. our evenings would be very tiresome, and as the nights get longer we will realize this more and more.

The Y. M. C. A. has to raise thirty-five million dollars to carry on the work through next year, not only in this country but across the water also. We at the camp realize what it would mean to have their campaign to raise this money fail. If the newspapers will take it up and keep the great need of the Y. M. C. A. before the people of the country, we feel sure that the money will be raised. The Y. M. C. A. is more important than any other endeavor I can imagine. It is always putting the good things of life to the front, and I tell you it is appreciated here. Trusting you will give this your consideration, I remain, as ever, one of your interested readers whenever I can get your paper.

H. E. COOPER, Q. M. C.

PIE DAY FOR CO. 9

BOYS ON DEAD MAN'S ISLAND REVELING IN PASTRY TODAY

A few pies came in to the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday afternoon, and they came in rapidly this morning. Some left no name and some names were too dimly written to be read. Mrs. Nanno Woods took charge. Mr. W. W. McElroy took the precious freight in regular baker's pie boxes, kindly loaned by the Russell Purity Bakery, 442 West Broadway. They were packed by Mrs. McElroy and Mrs. Nanno Woods. Following are the names that could be obtained: Mesdames Baruch, T. F. Preston, Heald, M. J. Heald, Marion Addison, J. A. Thayer, J. N. McGillis, W. E. Hewitt, Clark, S. C. Packer, Joe Smith, Harrison, W. W. McElroy, Wells, Alice Rand, Cable, Jennie C. Sloan, Gervaise, Atkinson, Walter Jones, Bosserman, Nanno Woods, Hammond, Sharpe, J. F. Pearson, Julius Kranz, R. A Blackburn, L. A. Lawshe, Ruth Boss, Grist, Herman Nelson, Charles Norton, Brookes, E. E. Young, Jesse Smith, Wildman, and the Misses Peggy Butterfield, Mosher, Cutler, Margaret Frey, and Irene Mauk. A number of pies each were also contributed by the Broadway Bakery, Russell Bakery, Dolly Varden Confectionery and Hotel Gray. Others were to come, but not delivered at this writing. About one hundred pies are accounted for so far and the Garden Society will make up any shortage, so there is little doubt that every boy will have his pie. One hundred fifteen is the number required. Those who contributed cheese were Mesdames Pratt, John Horsch, W. E. Hewitt. The Russell Bakery Company contributed a box of chewing gum to aid the boys' digestion.

LOCAL TEACHERS HONORED

Miss Mary Greenlaw and Mr. B. H. Pearson of the Glendale Studio, Fulmer building, and Miss Gertrude Champlain, whose home is at 1541 Hawthorne street, have been appointed teachers in the Glendale branch of the well-known Chicago school, the Sherwood School of Music. The present plan of this school is for extension work, with local teachers in each branch. There are now a large number of these branches in Southern California. In Santa Monica the teacher who has charge of the Sherwood work is Miss Gretchen Rebok, whose father is the superintendent of Santa Monica schools. In Pasadena Mrs. Alice Coleman Batchelder and Miss Lillian Powers are among the teachers, in Long Beach Abby DeAverett, and in Los Angeles Miss Fannie Dillon and Mr. Morton F. Mason.

The Sherwood Music School of Chicago was founded nearly twenty years ago by Wm. H. Sherwood, "America's greatest pianist," and is said to have graduated more successful concert pianists and teachers than any other music school. The extension department was founded to "extend" the opportunity for Metropolitan conservatory training to music students who find it inconvenient to leave home to obtain it.

Although extension work has been an important and successful feature of university study for years, the Sherwood school is the only conservatory of established reputation in America to adopt this plan, following the lead in this respect of such famous European music schools as Trinity College, London, which has branches and affiliated teachers all over the world.

To carry out its plan, the extension department of the Sherwood Music School establishes branches in communities where the musical interest is sufficient to warrant it. Instead of sending teachers from Chicago to take charge of such a branch, the policy of the school is to select some of the best local teachers and put them in charge of the work, electing them to membership on the extension department faculty.

Miss Greenlaw, Miss Champlain and Mr. Pearson, in taking the Sherwood work in connection with their private teaching, are trying to maintain a high standard of music study in Glendale, as well as to make it possible for our boys and girls who are taking music seriously and who want to get metropolitan conservatory training, and earn their credits, certificates and diplomas from a high-class institution of national reputation, to do so without leaving home.

The Glendale Evening News booster week begins next Monday. Assurances have already come to us that many kind words will be spoken concerning Glendale's daily paper next week.

SHORTER HOURS

CHAFFEE EMPLOYES TO HAVE SHORTER HOURS. WILL CLOSE SATURDAY AT 7:30 O'CLOCK

Hereafter the Chaffee grocery store in Glendale will close at 7:30 p. m. Saturday evenings instead of remaining open until about 10.

"We want to shorten the Saturday working hours of our employes," said A. L. Hadley, general manager of the big concern, in making the announcement today. "There is a general demand for shorter hours on Saturdays. We believe there is justice in it and in recognition of it our stores will hereafter close at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evenings."

The announcement was hailed with great satisfaction by the great force of employes on the Chaffee company payrolls. It was a voluntary concession from the company. To them it means an end to the deadly grind of Saturday that in the past has been their lot, as it is the lot of virtually everybody in the grocery business. They were enthusiastic in their praise of their employer, Mr. Chaffee, for his fine spirit in granting the shorter Saturday work day without waiting to see what other stores would do. The Chaffee company makes a bold new move in the grocery trade by shortening the Saturday work-day, for it has long been a tradition of the grocery and provision world that the stores remain open late on Saturday nights.

The Chaffee company and its employes, who are the beneficiaries of the earlier closing, believe that the concern will not suffer any loss of business by closing at 7:30 o'clock, while competitive houses remain open two and a half hours or more longer. They believe that the public will do its shopping earlier. The Chaffee company employes will urge the public to co-operate in their enjoyment of free Saturday evenings by buying their week-end supplies before 7:30 o'clock.

Packer, John Roman, John Fanset, R. M. Jackson, V. M. Tressler, J. W. Pearson, the architect, and A. W. Priest.

GOOD BRAINS DON'T ALL TRAVEL THE SAME WAY

In their mental operations I see about me all the time two groups of men—the mosquito fleet and the elephant brigade. The mosquito boys think quickly, and dart to conclusions like lightning. You will get an opinion out of them instantly that will be superior to any they will be able to produce after consideration. The elephant boys take more time. They move slowly. They like to think things over. Ask them for an opinion, and they will do better if they meditate.

There is no special choice between these two groups. In each group there are quantities of men of great ability. I can at this moment think of two wonderful Presidents of the United States—one a mosquito and the other an elephant.

As between men and women, it can be said in general that women are of the mosquito type. They pride themselves on their instinct for quick judgment. Men call it intuition. The "bright" boy at school is usually of the mosquito type. His intellectual performances are rapid and showy. He may or may not go on and succeed—but if he does make good he won't get any particular credit for it from his schoolmates, simply because they "always knew he was smart." It takes a successful elephant to go back to his class reunion and stir up enthusiasm. Nobody expected much of him, and consequently everybody is prepared to applaud his achievements.

It is amusing to watch these two kinds of men meet. The mosquitoes bother the elephants, and the elephants bother the mosquitoes. In games, especially, the irritation between the two reaches its height. If it is cards, the mosquito, with his leaping mind, knows in a second what he wants to do, while the elephant has to wait for his inspiration. Some games are better adapted to one of these groups than to the other. Take chess, for example—an admirable game for the elephant type of mind. There is a game which two elephants can enjoy for a week at a stretch.

The worst thing that can happen to a man is to think himself an elephant when he is a mosquito, or a mosquito when he is an elephant. Some of the most terrible misfits in the world are misplaced elephants and misplaced mosquitoes. For example, a mosquito and an elephant can go into law practice together and supplement each other's talents beautifully. But the elephant had better keep out of court, where nimbleness of mind is peculiarly required.

Another point is that the mosquitoes ought never to tease the elephants to try to take on mosquito-like speed. Neither should the elephants tease the mosquitoes to try to take on elephantine deliberation. It can't be done. Let every man work according to his own instinct. The minute he begins to impersonate somebody else he loses himself, and his judgments and decisions are of less value.

As a final observation, it may be well to record the fact that both classes of men are entirely satisfied with their equipment. The mosquitoes think there is nothing so greatly to be desired as agility, and the elephants pride themselves on their deliberation, which is, I suppose, as it should be—for without self-appreciation man would surely perish.—American Magazine.

BOOKS FOR THE SOLDIERS

The object of the "war library week" campaign, now being waged throughout the United States, under the direction of a committee appointed by the Secretary of War, and with the approval and assistance of President Wilson, appeals strongly to the thoughtful citizen. If anyone is entertaining the impression that this movement for furnishing books for the soldiers is not really practical, a moment's consideration should convince him that the reverse is strictly true.

It is worth noting, at the start, that the chairman of the Library War Council of the American Library Association, the group of people already referred to as having charge of this undertaking, is Frank A. Vanderlip, who has just resigned the presidency of the largest bank in the country in order to contribute his services to the Government, without pay, until the end of the war. He may be also an idealist, but no one will dispute that he is a practical man. The council announces that it "will buy books, build and maintain libraries at thirty-two training camps and cantonments of United States soldiers, sailors, and airmen at home and abroad." "The library," it adds, "must follow the soldier, with its sane, recreational, and promotional influences." While contributions have been invited of books of fiction, such as adventure, sea stories, detective stories, historical novels, and collections of short stories, books of drama, history, biography, heroism, travel in countries where the war is going on, books on patriotism, courage, and good citizenship, also books for the uneducated, as well as French grammars and dictionaries, yet the emphasis is now being put on contributions of money. Among the works which will need to be bought are technical books on aviation, wireless telegraphy, submarines, automobiles, signaling, drawing and lettering.

"A Million Dollars for a Million Books for a Million Men" is the slogan of the campaign to be completed on Saturday. The council directs those willing to help financially to leave the money they may wish to give at public libraries or banks, and to make checks payable to the Library War Council. There are convincing evidences that the movement is popular. In Boston, for example, however, according to the statement of a member of the council, while the response as shown by gifts in small amounts is hearty, there is need of contributions in larger sums in order to make up the city's apportioned total of $50,000. It is not improbable that this situation is typical of conditions in other parts of the country.

This means of helping to win the war, as well as of bringing genuine assistance, greater intelligence, and wholesome entertainment to the defenders of the nation and of democracy, is open to all, since ways are found for presenting the opportunity to men, women, and children generally in their everyday haunts. With the appeal and the organization reaching throughout the country, it will be surprising if the required fund is not promptly oversubscribed.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Glendale Evening News should be delivered at your home by the carrier not later than 4:30 p. m. every day except Sunday, and usually much earlier than that time. Subscribers who have not received their paper at 4:30 o'clock, should notify the office by phone: Glendale 132, Home 2401.

RED CROSS NURSES PREPARING FOR SERVICE

More than 2000 Red Cross nurses are now engaged in active nursing service, and another 2000 in teaching and committee work, the National Committee on Nursing of the American Red Cross announced today. Nine thousand more stand ready to serve at once, and a number of trained nurses volunteering for service with the Red Cross now averages 1000 a month.

Miss Jane A. Delano, chairman of the nursing committee, said today that the general scheme of unit organization was to keep together groups of nurses and doctors with experience in the same training schools and hospitals. Base hospital units for the army and navy have been recruited from alumnae of the schools connected with the largest hospitals in the country, in groups of 20, 40, 65 and 100.

Besides the base hospital units, the Red Cross has established units of nurses for emergency use. Such a hospital unit consists of one doctor and 25 nurses.

Specially trained nurses are being held in readiness for work in units devoted to pediatrics, orthopedics, mental diseases and public health.

Infant welfare nurses have already been sent to France and to Roumania Plans are also under way for a special unit of nurses trained in the care of mental diseases to serve in the mental wards of the hospitals established at the thirty-two army cantonments. Units in orthopedics are being prepared to meet the needs of the maimed in the reconstruction hospitals. In the civil zones surrounding the training camps and cantonments and the naval bases, fifty public health nurses have been assigned to work under the Red Cross sanitary directors. Ninety-five Red Cross nurses in the town and country nursing service are engaged in teaching and nursing in rural and mining districts that the public health at home shall not suffer needlessly.

EVOLUTION OF THE TABLE

The beginning of the nineteenth century saw the disappearance of the "hundred-legged" dinner table, and the pillar-and-claw table made its bow, as the most comfortable of tables; and with this the modern table has arrived. Of the strangely uncomfortable, clumsy types evolved during the Victorian period, the least said the soonest forgotten. They came with the glass flowers, the haircloth furniture and the marble tops and twisted, spindling legs and veneer finish. Today the beautiful in all that is past is being reproduced in the "American renaissance of art," to suit the rapidly growing demands for greater beauty in form, color scheme and line in the interior of the home.

First Traveler—So you have returned from Africa? Had any narrow escapes?

Second Traveler—Only one—a regular prize winner, I should think.

First T.—Let me hear it.

Second T.—Well, I was chased by a big lion and, having no cartridges left, I threw away my rifle and faced the brute; but as he sprang at me I caught him by the lower jaw with one hand and by the nose with the other. And there I stood and held his mouth open until he starved to death. A narrow escape, eh?

MAKING THE CAMPS SAFE

Red Cross Sanitary Units are being established to protect the health of civilians surrounding three more army encampments in this country. Fifteen cities are now receiving the co-operation of the Red Cross in making the communities surrounding the camps safe for the soldiers, and in taking measures to prevent the spread of disease or epidemics.

The three latest cities to receive Red Cross aid in sanitation are Greenville, S. C., Macon, Ga., and Manhattan, Kan. It is near the latter city that the Fort Riley National cantonment is located, and there are National Guard encampments near the other two cities. Each Sanitary Unit operates under the direction of an officer of the Public Health Service, and the Field Directors of the Red Cross Bureau of Camp Service have been made the business agents of the Units. Co-operation between the Public Health Service and the Red Cross has been firmly established.

In each of the fifteen cities where a Red Cross Sanitary Unit has been requested and furnished, the Unit co-operates with the Public Health Service, the State Board of Health and the local health authorities in establishing full and efficient sanitary organizations for the inspection of milk and water supplies, the control of infectious diseases, and the general sanitary inspection of the community. In southern communities, such as at Greenville and Macon, considerable work is being done in the eradication of malaria-bearing mosquitoes in the vicinity of the camps.

DISEASES OF PIGEONS

(By T. Fielding Cottrell, V. S.)

The diseases of pigeons are rarely understood even by old fanciers, and in the case of common pigeons it is often wiser to kill a sick bird at once, for fear that it has a contagious disease. But with a fancy bird, the value may be so great that it is perhaps worth while to try to treat it. In order to do this, it must first be isolated from the rest. The following are the commonest diseases:

Roup

This is usually caused by cold and damp, and shows itself by a difficulty in breathing and swallowing. On examination, the mouth, nostrils and throat are seen to be inflamed and a swollen growth often takes place in these parts which resembles that seen in diphtheria in humans. A watery discharge takes place from the nostrils at this time, which, when neglected, soon results in death. Roup is very contagious, and therefore when treating it the first thing to do is to isolate the bird and keep it warm. Then, morning and evening, wash out the mouth with a feather dipped in a weak solution of alum and water, or, better, use a quarter of an ounce of sulphate of copper in a pint of water, and give a roup pill every evening. Some prefer to make their own, and to these the following is recommended:

Castor oil, half an ounce; glycerin, half a teaspoonful; pepper, ground, one teaspoonful; mustard, ground, one teaspoonful; sweet nitre, half a teaspoonful; powdered rue, one teaspoonful; oatmeal, fine, enough to mix.

Mix and make into pills of ordinary size. Disinfect the house and add a little hyposulphate of iron to the drinking water.

Bronchitis

Bronchitis is really a cough caused by cold. The seat of it is in the lungs and it is shown by coughing and sneezing. This is serious, and any neglect will quickly lead to death. At once place the bird in a warm, dry place. I believe it is wise to give one dose of two or three grains of Epsom salts in a teaspoonful of water, or a few drops of castor oil may answer, but do not repeat.

Some fanciers I know made it a rule when any disease resembling either of the above appeared, to mix together turpentine with equal parts of pine tar and to burn this in the loft when the birds were roosting. A thin black smoke was the result, which temporarily turned the pigeons into sweeps, but the air impregnated with the medicine had to be breathed, and therefore reached the diseased parts. The results were satisfactory. Even better than this is to give one or two drops of the same medicine you would take yourself for a cough. If it will do you good, it will also act beneficially for your birds. Don't forget this.

Rheumatism

This is shown by stiffness of the limbs, and is generally caused by the bird being compelled to live in a damp place. To treat it, begin by giving a dry home. Then make up some pills containing two or three grains of salicilate of soda, and give one every three hours.

Canker

Canker is the name given to all kinds of unrelated growths and skin diseases. These growths I like to remove with a pair of scissors or by scraping with a sharp piece of wood. Of course, they bleed, but I never mind that. Then I dress them with a lotion composed of six parts of glycerin, one part of turpentine and one part of perchloride of iron. In other cases where the affected part is small, I prefer to dampen it and touch it with a caustic pencil (nitrate of silver), or to paint it with tincture of iodine.

Consumption

This is incurable, but there are many cases of "going light" which resemble this disease and which are really due to the system, and especially the blood, being out of order, and which are often cured by pulling out the whole of their tail feathers. This really bleeds the birds and rouses up their organs, so that they seem improved. Probably it is as well to give a few drops of castor oil and give wheat, hempseed, etc., and also instead of water let them have milk to drink.

Scrofula

Scrofula is shown by cheesy deposits under the skin, particularly on the wings. The cure is doubtful, and consists in opening these with a knife, or it may be safer and perhaps quite as effective to paint them with tincture of iodine.

Fractures

For fractures, mix some cold water starch with cold water, and dip into it a piece of tape. Then set the broken bone and bind it firmly with the prepared tape. Fasten the end and place the bird in a narrow box or basket to keep it in one position as long as possible, which will be helped by covering the box and thus making it dark. In case of broken wings I have used an elastic band or even placed the bird in a stocking leg to render it immovable for a week or more until the bone had time to join.

Wounds

First clean the wound and wash it with water containing enough creolin to make it look milky. Then stitch the edges together, using white cotton or silk. Then keep it as quiet as possible.

Vermin

Much of the bad luck with fancy pigeons is due to vermin which live either on the body of the bird or in the nest or in holes and crevices in the building. These may roughly be classed as mites, lice and fleas. Whatever or wherever they are, they are undesirable. The common insect powder of the drug store, or even powdered sulphur, should be used freely by being dusted over the birds or sprinkled on their nests. This will check all of them. You can help, too, by periodically limewashing the building.

Feeding

A mixture of peas, barley, tares and corn is better than all one kind of food.

Old mortar or crushed oyster shells or lime in some form is necessary for confined birds.

Keep a piece of rock salt always in a readily accessible place for the birds to help themselves.

Pigeons can stand cold, but a damp place or a stuffy place is a death trap. They must have lots of good fresh air.

The nesting place must be in a shady, darkened place, out of the direct sunlight, and it is as well to remember that the birds know their business better than you or I. Therefore, do not interfere with them. Let them alone.

Feed regularly at fixed hours.

See that the drinking water is present all day long, but have regular hours only for the bath.

NEW SLANG WHICH IS OLD

A new slang phrase is sprung and sweeps the country. If it is apt and pat you will hear it on the street, from the pulpit and in the schoolroom. Then, apparently without reason, its vogue vanishes, and it is added to the world's collection of antiquities.

Perhaps one reason why a new slang expression is short lived is because some investigator finds that it really is not new, but merely a revival of a phrase which in its day was not slang at all. It has remained for Prof. R. P. Utter in Harper's Magazine to throw light on the expression "Good night!" meaning finality. The vaudeville entertainers who first used it, thinking they were originators, should be a trifle crestfallen to find that it belongs to one William Shakespeare, Get out Part I of "Henry IV." You will read there:

"If he fall in, good night! Or sink or swim."

But that isn't all. "Come off" and "Go sit down" have had their day, but we all thought they were new until Professor Utter found them both in Chaucer.

And "Not in it" and "Cut it out," both striking American slang phrases, come from English literature of the highest type. Shakespeare used "Not in it" and Richard Brinsley Sheridan incorporated "Cut it out" in one of his plays.

A DOCTOR AND A THRONE

That George V now sits on the throne of England is due in no small measure to the prognosis of a seventeenth century physician, Dr. Richard Mead, who was born in London August 11, 1673. When Queen Anne, last of the Stuart rulers, became fatally ill in 1714 Dr. Mead was called in consultation. After an examination of the stricken queen he found that she was near death's door, and the doctor so informed the leaders of the Whig party, with which he was affiliated.

The Whigs favored the Hanoverian succession, and immediately on learning that Anne was soon to succumb began to plan for the realization of their ambitions. The regular physicians of the Queen did not believe that she was so near to death, so when Anne breathed her last in 1714 the supporters of Anne's brother, James, were unprepared for the event. Anne's Tory ministry was in favor of placing James on the throne, but the Whigs, thanks to Dr. Mead, had already taken such action as to insure the succession of the elector of Hanover, and in September George I made his triumphal entry into England.

Dr. Mead was rewarded by being made physician to the new royal family. Many English historians have attributed large importance to the physician's prognosis in bringing about the succession of the royal house which has ruled England for two centuries.—New York World.

INVENTORS SHOULD DIRECT ENERGIES ALONG FRUITFUL LINES

California inventors who have ideas for war inventions which they wish to lay before the U. S. Navy Department should send drawings illustrating their ideas and not models, according to a communication received to-day by the Californai State Council of Defense from the Council of National Defense. Such drawings should be addressed to the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., in a plain envelope. Inside the first envelope should be a second one containing the drawings and addressed to the Secretary of the Navy and marked with the word "Invention." Following out of these instructions will preserve secrecy and result in the communication being turned over, unopened, to a confidential officer.

In order that the energies of inventors may be directed along fruitful lines, the National Council through the California State Council of Defense is sending to all county councils in the State a pamphlet which tells of the obstacles which must be overcome along certain inventive lines. These pamphlets will be suppiled to inventors by County Councils of Defense upon request.

According to the pamphlet, which was prepared by the Navy Department, the use of magnets to divert or attract torpedoes is impracticable. For the protection of merchant vessels from torpedoes, the Navy Department has on file more than 1500 proposed designs in the shape of nets and metallic shields, says the pamphlet, and few if any of these are practicable.

"Don't send models and don't come to Washington to present your ideas—write!" is the injunction to inventors. "By writing you can save yourself much trouble and expense and at the same time save the time and energy of very busy naval officials who are highly trained in interpreting drawings and who can get your idea more clearly and in less time than they can if you present it verbally and in person."

It is reported that arrangements have been made to export large quantities of American corn to Mexico. We may not be heaping coals of fire on their heads but we are coming mighty near it.

TUJUNGA

We regret to hear of the severe illness of Mr. Saeger, who lived on Stephens Way and also had a home in Casa Verdugo. Both Mr. and Mrs. Saeger were in poor health when here in the early summer. Mr. Saeger is, we understand, at the hospital in a serious condition. The sympathy of their friends goes out to them.

Mr. Hitchcock, on Haynes canyon road, is worried about his wife and children who are visiting in the vicinity of the fire raging near Fillmore. Mr. Wieman has gone there to get news of them.

Mrs. Fortinier attended a meeting of the Sierra club at the beach on Wednesday. About one hundred were present and the time was enlivened by speeches, followed by a campfire dinner.

Whether the long continued heated term has anything to do with it or not we do not know, but just now there is more sickness in the valley than we have ever known. Miss Emma Kraft, Miss Lila Livingstone, Mrs. Kearney and the little grandson of W. H. Wieman are on the list. Mr. Alec Wilson, who has been in the hospital for the past three weeks, was reported to be very low, with no hope of recovery.

Rev. Mr. Brown and wife, who have been in the Fred Johnson house on Pine street for the past month, returned to their home on Tuesday.

Mrs. Hetty Hartranft, the venerable mother of M. V. Hartranft, passed away on Monday, October 1. She was well known and loved for her good works and deeds. She leaves two sons, Marshall Hartranft of Tujunga and William Hartranft of Phoenix, Arizona.

Mrs. Batchelder of Los Angeles is occupying the Corser house on Los Angeles street for the fall.

Robert Kearney was a guest of his father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. Kearney, for a few days.

The Bishop of the Episcopal diocese will be in Tujunga, October 14th, to dedicate the new church on Pine street, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson.

The many friends of Mrs. Edna Heald will be surprised to hear of her marriage to John Storm of Ontario, on September 14th. The best wishes of her friends will go with her and trust that the name has no significance for the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Shiras are contemplating leaving Tujunga next month. We shall be very sorry to lose them as they have endeared themselves to all in the village. They will go to Coachella for a time before determining their future home.

Mrs. Kempson and daughter have returned to Los Angeles after a summer's residence in their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamson, who have been at Wheeler Springs all summer, are again at their home on Greeley street.

Miss Jessie Dunning, mother and Dr. White motored to Monrovia on Saturday.

Mrs. W. H. Weiman left on Monday for a visit with her son and family in Sacramento and will be gone about two weeks.

The Ladies' Aid will hold their monthly meeting on October 4 with Mrs. Ward on San Ysidro road.

The Woman's Guild of the Episcopal church will hold their regular meeting with Mrs. Fortinier on San Ysidro road, on Wednesday, October 9, at 2:30 p. m.

At the board meeting of the Woman's Club it was decided to hold the first meeting on October 11th at the home of Mrs. Marsten. Conservation of food will be the topic of the day and every member is asked to give her experience in canning and drying for the coming winter. Every member is urgently requested to attend, as business of importance will come before the meeting. Don't forget the time and place, October 11, at Mrs. Marsten's on Sunset boulevard, at 2:30 p. m.

It is hoped that every lady in Tujunga will aid in the Red Cross work this fall. The meetings are held on Monday afternoons at Mrs. Ludke's on Sunset and on Thursday afternoon at Mrs. Parcher's on San Ysidro. The regular meeting occurs on Friday afternoons at Miss Benedict's on El Centro. Mrs. Dean will give out and receive all knitting at the store, while Mrs. Ludke has charge of the sewing branch. We already have 38 knitters, but the sewers are not so many. All of the work is furnished free to the auxiliary here.

Bread in Civil War Times

During the Civil War my father owned and operated a bakery in Michigan. Previous to the war people paid five cents a loaf for bread. All bread was made by hand, even the kneading. It was cut off loaf by loaf and weighed singly. When flour went up to $15 a barrel the price was raised to 10 cents a loaf, and from that time to this, for a half century, we have been paying war prices for bread. Meanwhile, new inventions in bread-making machinery have brought down the cost of bread-making. One man today can do the work of twenty men in those days, yet even then when father supplied one of the regiments quartered in our home town he received eight cents a loaf for large loaves and made a good per cent. of profit. If he could do it then it can be done now, for everything else was just as high as now. Any housewife who makes her own bread, even at present prices, finds it costs her 7 or 8 cents a loaf. Good, first-class bread can be made without the use of milk and may be still further cheapened by using a cup of mashed potatoes to each two loaves. If she raises her own potatoes the cost is still less. Now, if the housekeeper can make bread for 7 or 8 cents a loaf, paying retail prices for all ingredients, what is the reason the bakers, who pay wholesale prices for the ingredients, cannot sell for ten cents a loaf?

LA CANADA

Mysteriousness continues to surround the regular meeting of the Improvement Association that will be held Saturday night, October 6, in the school auditorium. Something regarding the El Monte Orchestra has been mentioned. Mrs. Schiefflin, chairman for the evening, will only say when questioned: "Tell everyone to come and have a good, hearty laugh."

The Christian Endeavor Society will hold its first meeting Sunday evening, October 7. Everyone is invited to attend this meeting. Remember, the society needs your co-operation to make it a success. The first few minutes of the meeting will be devoted to Bible study. This Bible study class will meet at 7 o'clock. The portion studied will be the Book of Mathew, and Mrs. Scott will serve as leader. The theme for the coming Sunday evening will be the first chapter of the book, and will be considered on the following plan: (1) Content of the chapter; (2) How many historical facts are noted in it? (3) Significance of the introductory verse; (4) Significance of the addition of other names and facts; (5) What relation is there between the first and second parts of the chapter? (6) Atmosphere of chapter; (7) World background. Remember, the study hour is open house. All in the valley are urged to come.

Mrs. Murry and daughter, Mrs. Knight, have returned to the valley, after spending a delightful three weeks in Long Beach.

Mrs. Jewett and daughter, Fannie, have returned to the valley after spending three months in the East, visiting not only Mrs. Jewett's son, Edward, but friends and relatives. Edward Jewett enlisted in the coast artillery four months ago, and since serving in this department has been promoted twice.

The regular meeting of the Red Cross was held Tuesday, October 6, in the school building. Eighteen ladies were present at this meeting, and a great deal of work was accomplished. Folding gauze and making hospital shirts are keeping the ladies busy. Anyone who cannot attend these meetings, see Mrs. Penfield, as she can supply all willing hands with knitting.

Mr. Hubert Bentley, who enlisted as transport driver in the French army, is now at the front. Two letters have been received by his wife, Mrs. Rachel Bentley, and in a short time the Tri-City will be able to publish them. Mr. Bentley's letters have been intensely interesting and instructive, and are being followed with a great deal of interest not only by his friends, but by all readers of the Tri-City.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Seright have returned from spending a delightful six weeks in the East, visiting relatives and friends. The only difficulty encountered, according to Mrs. Seright, was that "time flew with them."

Glendale High is claiming a large number of La Canada young people this year. Those attending are: Flossie Lea, Opal Lea, Anna Armstrong, Lova Peet, Elsa Anderson, Tony Lannularo, Ewin Potts, Paul Arvidson and Charles Olson.

"I've called, Mrs. Jones, to learn why Tommy has not attended his class lately," began the sweet young Sunday school teacher, a frown on her pretty face.

"Well, Miss Goodleigh," answered Mrs. Jones, "the reason why I've kept Tommy away from Sunday school is because the knowledge he received there was making him a wicked boy."

"A wicked boy!" gasped the amazed teacher. "Really, Mrs. Jones, I cannot imagine to what you refer."

"You see, it's this way, Miss Goodleigh," explained Mrs. Jones, determinedly. "The last time Tommy went to Sunday school you taught him that people are made of dust. Well, when he came home he nearly frightened me to death by trying to draw his little baby sister into the vacuum cleaner."

During the first week at work in the crockery shop Sam had carelessly broken a large vase. On pay day he was called into the manager's office.

"Half of your $4 a week wages will be stopped," said the manager, "until you have paid for that $30 vase."

Sam grinned. "Well, sir," he remarked, "it looks like I'm sure of a steady job, anyhow."

RECREATION IN NATIONAL FORESTS

That a larger number of people than ever before visited the national forests of California this summer was a statement made by Luther Whiteman of the forest service at the Pan-Pacific conference, recently held in San Francisco.

"Although complete reports from the forest supervisors have not yet been received, there is data at hand for estimating that at least a million travelers, campers and sportsmen visited the eighteen national forests in California for recreation purposes this season—the greatest number visiting the forests of this state in the history of the forest service. The automobile traffic was particularly heavy, and a comparatively large proportion of those traveling in automobiles came from other states."

The increased popularity of the national forests for recreation purposes was credited in part by Mr. Whitman to the advertising of the wonders and beauties of California's mountains by the forest service, and to the distribution of thousands of maps, posters and hand books informing the public just where to go and what to see. The construction and improvement of roads and trails and the excellence of fishing and hunting conditions in most of the forests, due largely to the protection given the game by the forest rangers, is also responsible for a large number of visitors, it was said. The opportunities to acquire without red tape at low cost long term leases of land in the forests upon which summer homes and permanent camps may be constructed also serve to bring many people into the mountains who would not otherwise come. In the Angeles national forest alone more than 700 permits have been issued for summer homes and permanent camp purposes. Lots that have been surveyed by the forest service on the shores of Huntington lake, Lake Tahoe and along the Feather river canyon, are also in great demand. The renting of larger tracts by churches, clubs, schools and municipalities for recreation uses is also becoming popular in California. The playground commissions of three of the largest cities in the state have acquired lands for this purpose, and the playground commissions of other cities have this project under consideration.

"Perhaps the men that Missouri is sending into the country's service will neutralize the effect of the continued presence in Washington of Senators Reed and Stone."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch. How many are you sending, 8,000,000?

FRIENDS OF GENERAL HAIG SAY HE HAS "THE GERMAN MIND"

LONDON, September 10 (by mail).—If the war in the west is a war of wits and nothing more, there is ground for the fear some people hold that it will end in a deadlock. For it is then simply one German brain against another. General Haig, according to men who know him best and admire him most, has "the German mind."

Fortunately, there is good reason to believe it is not altogether a matter of wits. There is the ultimate superiority of the allied resources and the difference in fighting quality between free people and subservient people. But if the fight were simply between Hindenberg and Haig its outcome would be a puzzle.

A great deal has been written about Hindenberg and very little about Haig. Little, in fact, has been known about the soldier directing the British armies in France. Modest and reticent personally, he has been a difficult subject for the newspapers, but the United Press in the past few days has tapped a new fund of information concerning him.

Most important of this information is the fact that he has completed the process of revolutionizing the British staff. When one reads in a German communique the phrase, "according to plan," one instinctively believes that the operation described actually had been carried out in keeping with carefuliy prepared plans; that chance did not figure in the matter at any stage. (Some of the German disasters which this phrase has been required to cover in recent months, however, have somewhat shaken this confidence.)

But no person can now doubt that the Haig armies are working "according to plan." Even the German high command is beginning to realize this, apparently, since it is ceasing to attribute purposes to the British armies beyond those achieved. Instance after instance wherein British units have taken the ground that would fit in with an exact plan and have refrained from taking more, have finally made it clear to the German generals that the British are fighting according to the rules the Germans had thought were their exclusive property.

It was Haig who initiated this character of battle, so far as the British are concerned. His military critics now say he has the "staff mind"; that is to say, he has the faculty of obtaining and utilizing the best strategical and tactical judgment of the members of his staff. His power of absorption is great, but it is not exceeded by his ability to reach a quick decision and carry it through. Once his decision is made, he has few misgivings as to results. This perhaps accounts for the serenity that marks his countenance under all circumstances.

Lord Haldane, former secretary of war, was first to ascribe to Haig the possession of the "German mind." The officers and men under him at Aldershot, where he was in command from 1911 until the war began, put the same thing in another way. They called him, among themselves, "Von Haig." Haig has been a long time acquiring this mastery of German methods, apparently. Field Marshal Evelyn Wood testified to this in the statement, "Haig knows more about the German army than any officer in England. Twenty years ago he wrote me from Germany, where he was spending a long leave, a letter so full of prophetic knowledge that I sent it to his young wife to keep. Some day someone who writes his life will see what he forecast twenty years before he went to fight the Germans."

The soldier will tell you Haig is a great soldier the politician or statesman, of his remarkable grasp of political affairs. The Rev. Mr. Duncan, of Edinburgh, will relate the commander-in-chief's faithfulness in attending Presbyterian service every Sunday morning. Newspaper men will subscribe to the general agreement, "He is more than a great soldier, he is a great gentleman."

UNPOPULAR

"Is Grumpa club man?"

"No; the only thing he is a member of is the human race and he's not in very good standing with that."

UNCULTURED

"Don't you love to hear the birds sing?"

"No. What do the birds know about music?"

Having whisked a dozen eggs from the hat, the magician announced: "Now I will produce the hen that laid those eggs!"

He drew forth a fluttering fowl, which he cast upon the stage, and turned to receive his applause. Just then the bird flapped its wings and loudly announced itself with a "Cock-a-doodle-doo!"

"Can't I send pa some books for summer reading?"

"Naw; pa don't want no books. He's got a thermometer to read."

PLAYED LOTTERY ON HIS WOUNDS AND WON

ROME, Sept. 10 (by mail).—A black haired soldier dropped into the state lottery office at Brescia, hesitating before the busy clerk while vainly trying to think of "lucky numbers."

"Oh, play on your wound; it may bring you luck," advised the impatient clerk, glancing at the silver tape on the soldiers' arm which indicated that he had been "wounded at the front."

The clerk got out the soothsaying book, and between them they interpreted the wound in "lucky numbers." The date and zone of the battle, the nature of the bullet and the feelings of its victim, all had their numerical equivalents.

"I don't want to win for myself," the soldier remarked. "I'm thinking of Maria and the youngsters. Think of what the money would mean to them. Madonna mia, bless my numbers."

The soldier risked 40 cents on the magic formula, far more than he could really afford. "Say, just jot my numbers down and send my winnings to my wife and babies, if I don't come back from the Carso," he told the lotteryman. The clerk jotted the soldier's numbers in a note book and turned to several talkative peasants.

The drawings were later held under the eye of Italian officialdom. The next day the clerk remembered the soldier, and, referring to his note book, discovered that the wounded stranger had won $5000.

Grocer—What have you been doing in the cellar so long?"

Grocer's Boy—I've been cleaning out the quart measure for the molasses. It was so gummed it didn't hold more'n a pint.

Grocer—You get your hat and get out. Tell your father to get you a job washing bottles; you ain't fit for the grocery business.

"My husband is particularly liable to seasickness, captain," remarked a lady passenger. "Could you tell him what to do in case of an attack?"

"'Tain't necessary, mum," replied the captain. "He'll do it."

Bacon—The giraffe is said to be the only animal in nature that is entirely dumb, not being able to express itself by any sound.

Egbert—It's just as well, for if it could speak it would talk over everybody's head.

"The Lord will provide," and that is about as far as a lazy man's religion ever gets.
